ple would like to have the public believe I am. My friends know my character and I am sure they do not believe the nasty insinuation that the charge contains. That is all I have to say."

This brought the following reply from Mr. Smith:

"In September, 1918, two women were taken in a raid and arrested about 1:30 a. m. outside the Claridge Hotel. They claimed that they were teachers in the Grand Central Dancing Academy and that they were particular friends of Colonel Porter, and that the officers who brought them in would be dismissed from the force. Thereafter certain persons, officers who were working with me, were brought before Inspector Henry and lined up with Henry's men for identification by these women. The detectives who were picked out were not the men who made the arrests. The arrests were made by Inspector Henry's men at my request.

"There was an attempt made at that time to intimidate the men in the department, who were honestly, faithfully and conscientiously working with me in cleaning up the city.

"The Grand Central Palace was at that time conducted by a man named Grundy, who, when obliged to vacate the premises, made application for a license in West Sixty-sixth Street, and I and other people on the West Side opposed the granting of the application and appeared before Commissioner of Licenses Gilchrist to oppose it. Commissioner Porter, then secretary to Police Commissioner Enright, appeared as a character witness for Grundy and I cross-examined him. The record of this cross-examination is on file in Commissioner Gilchrist over my protest granted the license for this dance hall, which is in Inspector Henry's district.
"I am willing to go to trial in this case in one week's time—or in forty-eight hours if necessary. I am not going to be intimidated. I am going to perform my duty as I see it.

Declares Men Will Testify

"I want to reiterate that this inquiry is not aimed at the Police Department as a whole, but at the individuals who have brought, and continue to bring, disgrace and odium on as excellent a body of men as have ever worn a uniform and done police duty. There was a time when it was impossible to get one policeman to testify against a brother officer, because it was not in accord with the police idea of esprit de corps. But that day is passed, and now the decent men of the department have determined upon a house cleaning from within. These men will assist and will testify against all those in the department who violate the law, no matter how high the rank or position may be. They feel that the people of New York will understand that the department shall be our servants and not our masters." Declares Men Will Testify ment shall be our servants and not our masters."

Porter arrived at the District Attorney's office at 10 o'clock in the morning, as promised by his lawyer. He appeared in a light and even jovial mood, and spent nearly an hour chatting with reporters and posing for photographs. He took particular pains in obliging the photographer and invited Mr. Hendrick to pose with him.
